A Home Concern

For the first time since its incorporation the Nevada Telephone-Telegraph company has declared a dividend, and with the dividend came the announcement that the company contemplated making quarterly payments, aggregating 10 cents per share per annum.

The telephone company is a local organization. The stock is held by Nevadans, the majority residing in Tonopah and the dividends will be spent at home. No better argument for patronizing home industry can be offered than the payment of this dividend.

Southern Nevadans constructed the telephone company and were instrumental in securing the advent of the Postal Telegraph company for this section. The two concerns might be termed as one, for the telegraph company operates wires leased from the telephone company. Money spent with the Postal company means accrued profits for the telephone company, and in turn assists in the payment of dividends.

On the other hand the opposition telegraph company has no money invested in Tonopah, other than the furnishing of an office that sends out thousands of dollars monthly to be paid in dividends to people who live thousands of miles from Nevada, and who know only of this state as a section that adds to their profits. The people of Tonopah receive practically nothing from the Western Union company, except what is paid for. Every bit of office equipment is shipped in from outside points. With the Postal company it is different. Stores are purchased in Tonopah, as is the equipment and the local people reap the benefit. In turn it should be the duty of every Tonopah merchant and businessman to encourage home industry. It has been frequently noted that a merchant complains when people send out of town for their goods, but when it comes down to practicing what is preached, the self-same merchant does not patronize the home telephone or telegraph company. This may be caused an unthinking habit, but the sooner the habit is corrected the better it will be for Tonopah.

The Bonanza is a strong advocate of the slogan of "patronize home industry," and believes in encouraging every person in Tonopah to do the same. In this same sense it can be readily realized the benefit that Tonopah realizes through the declaration of dividends by the telephone company, and were they to be declared every month, business conditions would naturally feel the result.

The New Man Without A Country

Capriano Castro, one time dictator of Venezuela, has attained the unenviable but spotlight position of a man without a country. Edward Everett Hale's patriotic vagary has materialized into flesh and blood. Castro is now the enforced guest of the United States at Ellis Island. He arrived at New York from France on a German vessel. He has been denied admission to this country as an undesirable citizen. He has selected Germany as his second choice for residence. The German line is willing to carry him to Hamburg, but it is not at all certain that the German government will permit him to land. The French press has already voiced the opinion of that government to the effect that, once rid of him, France will not accept Castro again under any terms.

Castro does not enjoy ocean travel. Nausea clings to him while on the water like his bad record. To him the world is dead, yet a capricious fate will not permit him to die. The gates of death have been untimely opened to him and he languishes in Hades while still breathing the air of life. Some great dramatist of the future will find a whole mine of epic philosophy in the life of this tyrant whose punishment is even more intolerable than that of Napoleon. The refinement of cruelty in human torture is not to be torn by wild horses or burned at the stake, but to be bound in a place where water will fall drop by drop on the forehead. The constant dripping becomes more agonizing than any positive pain inflicted by fire or steel. Castro is placed in a position of awful loneliness where he is spurned alike by death and life.

His present plight gives rise to a new problem for the nations. That German line can hardly be expected to carry the tyrant of Venezuela about dead-head on its vessels until fate releases him from his human bondage. Like our own selves, "a man must eat," and some one, somewhere, somehow must provide for each man's nourishment. Castro may become the cause that will effect a new kind of insurance, protection against perpetual passengers.
